WILLIAMS CHAPEL.

More Democratic Enthusiasm Than Ever Before.

Col. House, Mike Savage and Congressman Washington Talk Democracy to Twelve Hundred People.

All arrangements were perfect. The sun rode a cloudless sky and climbed the hill of heaven. About twelve hundred people had gathered together at Williams Chapel to do honor to Democracy's exponents. All were there, young, old, men, women and children, white and black. They had come to hear and enjoy a feast of reason and a flow of Democratic soul.

Col. John F. House, of this city, was the orator of the day. Boldly and well did he defend the faith of his fathers. He poured forth the vials of his wrath upon all the combined forces of the opposition. Mugwumps, Republicans and Populites all felt the stinging rebuke, the withering scorn, the terrible ridicule and the awful sarcasm, the like of which they had never felt before. Col. House was given a complete ovation by the people assembled at Williams Chapel. He confined himself to the records of Mr. Buchanan and Jas. B. Weaver, Mrs. Lease getting the benefit of a few keen thrusts. Mr. Buchanan has been badly treated, according to his own statement. How has he been badly treated? He has gotten more money out of the office of Governor than any other man ever got. He did this in the teeth of the constitutional provision to the contrary. Was that bad treatment? Mr. Buchanan wanted the earth, but the Democratic party has decided otherwise. The speaker took up the record of Weaver and sifted it for all it was worth. The greatest joke of the season was the attempt of Weaver and his bodyguard, Mrs. Lease, to break the great bulwark of the solid South. This was one of the greatest speeches that has been made in the present campaign.

Dinner was the next feature of the program, and there was ample food for the whole crowd. Barbecue and basket dinner combined made a very palatable repast indeed. The ladies had made this part of the occasion a complete success.

After dinner was over Mike Savage made a short talk, asking for the suffrage of the people of the county, and planting himself squarely upon the sound principles of true Democracy.

Jos. E. Washington was the next, and last pleasure of the day. Joe made one of his characteristic speeches, which seemed to take lodgment in the ears of his auditors.

The stand was beautifully decorated with chrysanthemums and cedar, with the words "Old Pete" artistically woven in the midst. A star-spangled banner waved in the breeze, and another by its side bearing the motto, "Pure Democracy; Democratic Rooster, and Old Pete." It was a gala day for Democracy, and much good was accomplished.

PADUCAH, KY., Oct. 18, 1890. This certifies that a few months ago my little son was afflicted with chills, and, after using quinine without effect I concluded to try Lemon Chill Tonic, and am pleased to say that a few doses, in accordance with directions, completely cured him. Other members of my family have used Lemon Chill Tonic with perfect satisfaction; hence I cheerfully recommend said remedy, being confident that it will do all that it is claimed for by its proprietors.

The game of ball between the Woodlawn and New Providence nines resulted in a victory to the Woodlawners of 29 to 7, at the end of five innings. ## Dr. John W. Hanner.

The Tennessee Methodist, among its conference notes this week, has the following:

Dr. John W. Hanner, Sr., was present and answered to his name. He is now 82 years of age, and has been a member of the Tennessee conference for sixty-three years. There is only one other member of the conference who was in it when he entered. Intense interest was manifested as Dr. Hanner recounted his connection with the conference and feelingly referred to his spiritual condition and bright hopes of heaven. The conference sang with great feeling the hymn, "E'en down to old age all my people shall prove My sovereign, eternal, unchangeable love; And when hoary hairs shall tint my temples adorn, Like lambs, they shall still in my bosom be borne." It was a touching scene.

BAD BLOOD

Between Strikers and Citizens at Beaver Falls, Pa.,

Over the Question of Opening the Carnegie Mills.

The Citizens and Business Men Determined the Mills Shall Resume Operations at Once, While the Strikers Are Just as Determined They Shall Remain Closed—A Riotous Meeting.

BEAVER FALLS, Pa., Oct. 28.—The citizens' meeting at the Sixth Avenue theater Wednesday night was attended by fully 1,000 people, many of whom were strikers. Speeches were made by a number of business men, who were frequently hissed. The speakers all advised the men to resume work. Resolutions were passed endorsing the action of those who held the conference with the Carnegie company, offering moral and civil support to the company and requesting them to start the mills at once.

At the close of the speeches an attempt was made by the strikers to capture. By a preconcerted movement, a motion was made to adjourn, prolonged calls of "No," drowned the chairman's voice and a striker named Brown, was forced on the stage. Brown began to call the meeting to order, and the citizens who rented the hall tried to prevent it.

Ike Broome, followed by a dozen others, rushed on the stage and endeavored to take possession of it, offering money for the use of the hall. At this point it needed but a single blow to precipitate a riot. Manager Cushman was finally prevailed upon to refuse to allow the meeting to proceed further, and Brown peacefully submitted to his wishes.

During these proceedings the greatest excitement prevailed, and twice an attempt was made to turn out the lights which would surely have brought on a terrible riot. Up to last evening over 500 signers had been obtained to the petition requesting the Carnegie company to resume work, and guaranteeing them public and private protection if they do.

FROM AMBUSH

A Planter Shot to Death While in Pursuit of His Adversary.

ATLANTA, Oct. 28.—George Walrove, one of the best known and most successful young planters in Fulton county, was shot to death Wednesday by Mike Holbrook, a Cobb county ballist. Walrove was in a store at Buckhead, one of Atlanta's suburban towns, when Holbrook came in. The two men had never met before, but soon began conversing.

The talk, at first trivial, resulted in a row which culminated in a fight, during which Holbrook struck Walrove over the head with a pistol.

Walrove, bleeding, swore vengeance. As Holbrook started for his home a few miles away, in Cobb county, a half hour later, Walrove started after him. Holbrook, fearing the pursuit, secreted himself in a grove, and shot Walrove to death as he came up. The killing has created great excitement near Buckhead. The coroner's jury will investigate.

AN IMPORTANT QUESTION.

Shall Clarksville Have a Military Organization in the Future.

"Merchant" Expresses Himself Very Candidly on that Question—A Matter Worthy of Earnest Consideration.

To the Tobacco Leaf-Chronicle.

It is meet and appropriate, that a correct statement should be made to the public, and to the citizens of Clarksville especially, in regard to the State Militia in this city, its past and present status, and the Coal Creek incident. Some six years ago, nearly one hundred young men here signified their willingness to become members of a military company, called the Clarksville City Guards, organized for the protection of life and property against lawless violence. When the time came for signing the enlistment papers only about sixty out of the one hundred signed. This was due to various causes, prominent among which was the fact that their employers—the very men who in time of trouble would be mostly benefited by the presence of such a company—would not permit them to join!

Witness the effect produced on the mob here on that riotous Christmas night three years since, when the boys assembled in their armory with rifles and ball cartridges, ready to perform any duty required of them. Though they were not put to the test then, no one doubts but what they would have met the trial like men.

The mere fact of their being armed and ready was sufficient to quiet the mob, restore law and order, and perhaps save business houses from being razed to the ground, as was threatened.

The C. C. G.'s, have nothing to lose, they are employees and possess nothing but their impecunious salaries; their services in the company are given without pay or hope of future reward. On the other hand, their employers are the men who have the largest interests at stake of any class in Clarksville and are the men who would derive the most benefit from their employees in the company. The boys would still be working for them. Will not the business men of Clarksville look at the matter in this light and seek to encourage, rather than oppose a military company in Clarksville. Your assistance is needed. For six years this company has stood together in the face of strong adversity and stern opposition. Now, for reasons which will be stated further on, they are disorganized, and up to date have not secured the requisite number of men to form a company.

The Coal Creek incident has produced this effect. The C. C. G.'s, were not organized for the sole purpose of taking a holiday trip to the scene of trouble in East Tennessee, where they might have a feast of milk and honey on the mountains, as some seem to suppose. On the contrary they were organized for the protection of Clarksville, as before stated. The same is true of every company in the State; each is for the protection of their own city first, though not last. Had the scene of trouble been here in Montgomery county the military boys all over the State would have responded to the call of duty and honor as gallantly in coming here as your own boys did in going away.

Now how were the Clarksville boys rewarded for exposing themselves to this possible danger and hard work, for drilling and camp life are hard work? After suffering the privations of hunger, fatigue and suspense; the march by day under a burning sun; the sentinel's lonely watch through the cold and dew-laden night; obeying without a murmur whatever command was laid upon them, yet longing for home, their reward was the promise of 43 cents per diem from the government, while in some instances losing their salaries at home, which appears to me to be a very short-sighted piece of economy. Let us give them the encouragement they deserve, and Clarksville can boast of the best military company in the State.

MERCHANT.

Hopkinsville's Woe.

Says the Hopkinsville Independent: "It is evidently the opinion of the small boy that the electric light globes were put up to afford him a target for sling-shots and rocks. Already a number of the globe have been smashed, and if this vandal in miniature gets in much more of his work the city will be again in darkness. It is the duty of every citizen to report to the authorities every case of this kind that comes under his observation."

No use of experimenting further when "C. C. C. Certain Chill Cure" is guaranteed to cure Chills and Fever, and is delightful to take. Sold by Owen & Moore.

Strong Words from Chamberlain.

LONDON, Oct. 28.—Mr. Chamberlain has written a letter to the Anti-Slavery association deprecating the abandoning of Uganda by the British government. He says that it would be cowardly and silly for Great Britain to abandon Uganda to barbarism or to allow another European nation to seize that country. A small expenditure, he asserts, would avert that undesirable result, and would at the same time strike a blow at the Arab slave dealers.

Rich Kentuckian Dead.

A FACTIONAL FIGHT.

An Interesting Story Concerning the Ivins-Hill Letters.

It Seems to be a Fight Between H. Clay Evans and John C. Houk for Supremacy.

The Knoxville Sentinel of Wednesday says:

"A prominent gentleman of the city gave the Sentinel the story, but does not vouch for its accuracy. It is a well known fact that the Republicans of Tennessee do not dwell together in a house of unity. Right here in the second Congressional district are two warring factions. The Gibson-Rule contingency wants the scalps of J. C. Houk and his followers. But that is neither here nor there. The incident is only used to refresh the memory of the public and call attention to the fact that what exists here may also exist to a larger extent throughout the State.

"J. C. Houk is now accredited with being the leader or boss of the Republican party in the State of Tennessee. Henry Clay Evans, candidate for Congress, would be a formidable rival of Houk's for the control of Federal power for the State of Tennessee. Evans is closer to and would have more influence with the administration if President Harrison is re-elected than Houk, for the reason that Houk was an ardent supporter of James G. Blaine for the nomination at Minneapolis, while Evans was equally as loyal to Harrison.

"After the organization of the Republican national committee the Houk faction conceived a scheme to turn Tennessee over to the Republicans. It is reported negotiations were opened with McDowell and the reported trade of his agreeing to bring out Buchanan and carry the State Republican for $15,000 and his election as senator was consummated.

"When the faction from East Tennessee appeared before the Republican national committee they wanted $60,000 to do the work of turning Tennessee over to the Republicans. This national committee thought was too much money and asked time for consideration. H. Clay Evans, of the Third, who is Houk's own party, but at the head of the other contending faction, had learned of the trade with McDowell for $15,000, and also the request of one of the national committee for $60,000. What was wanted with the other $45,000 was not learned, but as H. Clay thought it was not necessary to spend it to save the First and Second Congressional Districts he stepped in and notified the national committee he could control McDowell for $15,000. The trade, then, was made with McDowell, through the opposition to Houk.

"That the management of the deal with McDowell and the knocking them out of $60,000 worth of boodle should be so ruthlessly torn from their fists, made the East Tennessee Republican leaders as mad as hornets. Outwitted was no word for it, and how to get even with the Evans crowd was a discussion fraught with deep meaning.

"McDowell's deal with the Third district gang meant much toward Evans' election, and Evans' success meant not from 'b'—to breakfast, but 'b'—to Houk. Some way Evans' defeat must be accomplished. As Congressmen from the Third district and being in touch with President Harrison in case of his re-election, it would never do for Evans to go to Congress. He would control the Federal patronage for the entire State and John Houk would pose with about as much influence as a knot on a log.

"Heads were put together, scheming was indulged, the Ivins-Hill letters were brought forth and given to the public, and Ivins and Hill denied the connection of Congressman Houk with the affair or the McDowell trade, implicating Evans, however, and Houk is playing the role.

Even the Republicans send Ivins to the Third district and try to use him as a tool against Evans. Newell Saunders, Evans' friend, is brought out in the letter as confabbing with McDowell, and in every way possible Evans is implicated to accomplish his defeat. Ivins and Hill take the blame for their letters. They are the scapegoats. Ivins acknowledges he wrote the letter to Hill. Hill acknowledges he signed one but did not have sense enough to know what he signed. Why all this subterfuge? There is scheming by the Second district faction against the faction of the Third district. Evans must be defeated to retain Houk's supremacy. It must be done at any cost. Hence the "holier than thou" letters. Isn't the story plausible?
